

COLONY TRADITIONS

LONG TIME AGO, IN A LAND
FAR FAR AWAY...

Introduction

Colonial period family life was harder than ours. They didn't have the technology we have.

But not everything has changed.

We still have some traditions like "tomar la once" and "trompo"!

On this scrapbook I will be investigating about my family's past and seeing what things we keep on our culture from colonial period.

Grandparents

As said in the interview, we don't have any grandparent traditions, but september 18th is like a national tradition.

They do charquicán and pantrucas, just like colonial foods.

My grandfather does asado in special occasions, including september 18th.

Parents

My mom used to go out and eat something good with my grandparents, but now at days we don't have that tradition.

Is like we modified it, from anything once a month to sushi once a week.

Me

Who am I considering my ancestors and family's identity?

I can define myself by the things I do, like traditions. My grandmother used to cook with her parents, and my parents taught me to cook. My grandmother went to eat once a month, and now we eat sushi every week! Is just like colonies. Every tradition has an origin, and that origin comes from colonial period. Traditions have been changing through ages, and now we can see the result.

COLONY TRADITIONS

My family has changed a lot since colonies started forming. Life is different now, but we still have some old habits, like "Tomar la once" and september 18th!

Daniel Sepúlveda Alcaíno was born in June 22nd of 2009. On his 6 years of life, he would meet his dad, that would help him receive the parental help he needed.

When he was 8, on february 24th of 2018, his sister was born. She received the name Helena.

At age of 9 he changed schools to a new one called Dunalastair. R.E.M Wasn't that good. The only problem was that he didn't want to change, because he made a lot of good friends in R.E.M.

At the age of 10 he started a project that raised his imagination incredibly fast. His friend would make a book of the story, called FrenX, and Daniel would make new characters.

Now, with his 11 years old, he is stuck at home because of covid 19. His sister is already 2 years old and she is a demon. Daniel wishes Helena doesn't eat him during night.
